Eric Tippet and Angie Collver join Ausil Witzel at Inspiration Point. Mrs. Witzel started teaching here at Auburn in 1926.

1920 - 1995

75 Years Ago...

Every year alumni come to Auburn's campus to reflect on the way things were and to remark on how things have changed. The entire campus has shifted to the south as new buildings were built. Originally the school stood much nearer the cliff overlooking the Green River and consisted of an administration building with a dormitory attached to each side. It was not yet two years old in May 1921, when a fire originating in the boiler room swept first through the girls' dormitory and then engulfed the whole building. Students heroically rescued library books, some dorm furniture and pianos, but they could not save their school. Fortunately, nobody was killed.

By the following autumn, new buildings were ready. The girls had a new dorm separate from the main building, which was built on the old foundation; the young men lived in East Hall, which had been used as faculty housing.

Erected between 1922 and 1925, Inspiration Point was originally called "The Crow's Nest"--the rebuilt version does not have trees growing through it as the old one did.

In 1930 Western

Washington Missionary Academy changed its name to Auburn Academy; the following year Madge Gould composed Auburn's school song. During the depression years students used trees cut from school property to build Gibson Hall, a new men's dormitory.

Nelson Hall, originally named South Hall, was started in 1946 and completed three years later. In 1963 it was remodeled to face the new campus which was bounded by the just finished Witzel Hall, Rudolph Hall, and the large gym--Rainier Auditorium, erected in 1959.

The present administration building was started in May 1964 and was occupied the following December. It was followed by the swimming pool (1969), the music building (1974), the Spady Industrial Arts Complex (1974), and the church (1979).

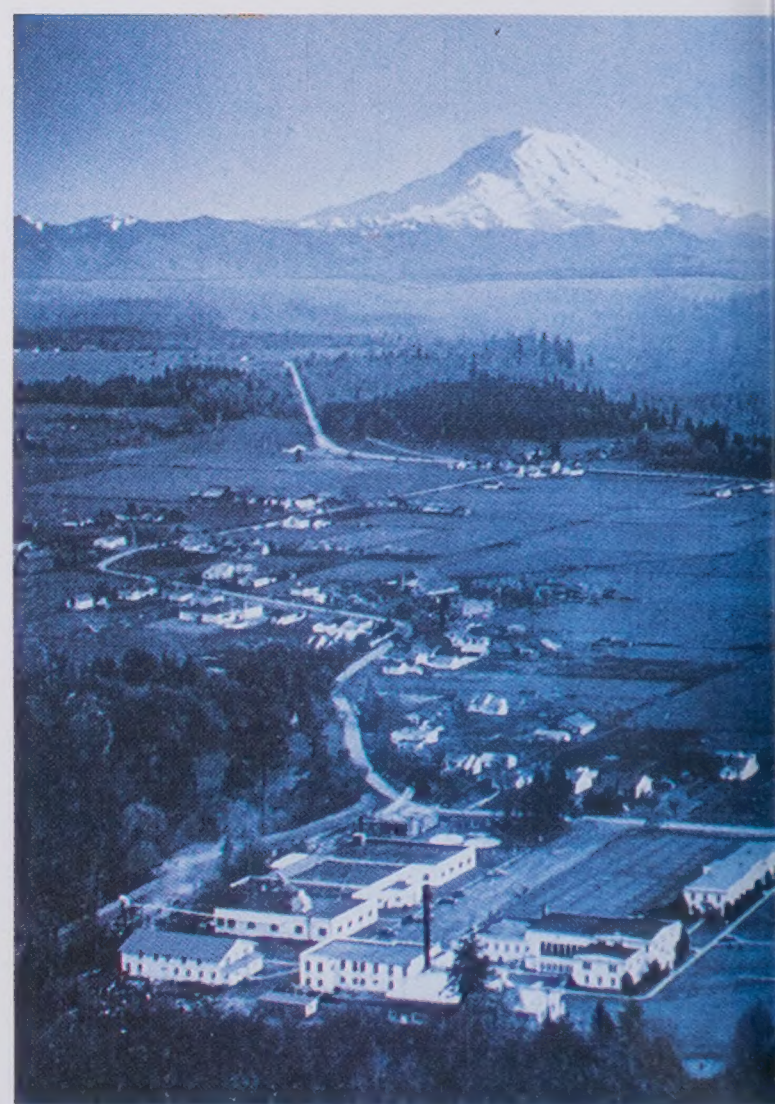

Gradually the old frame buildings were removed and grass now grows where students once studied, laughed and prayed. If you ever feel like reflecting, go walk on the sidewalks they once walked, imagine the towering white buildings, and linger awhile at Inspiration Point.

--Nathan Tidwell
JoAnn McKey

By 1972 the campus had expanded to its current size. Notice the absence of the Music Building, Spady Hall and the church from this aerial view.

Still recognizable in this 1948 view are the industry buildings on the left, Gibson Hall by the trees on the right, and Nelson Hall (then South Hall) which was still under construction, upper right. The structures in the center--the old administration building, girls' dorm, and rounded gym are all gone, though their sidewalks remain.

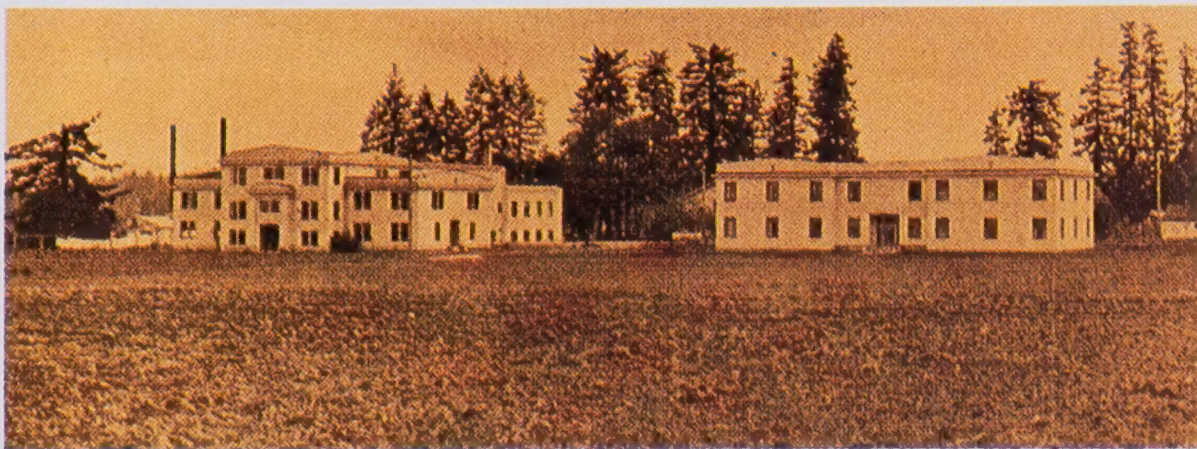

In 1927 the student body stood in front of the Administration Building (left), and the dorms. The boys' dorm (middle) was later used for a gym and still stands behind Sea Tac Pac.

The art class gets fresh ideas at Inspiration Point around 1926. Back when it was called the Crows' Nest, it had a swing hung from trees growing through the floor.

The original building, which included administration rooms, girls' dormitory (left) and boys' dormitory (right), burned on a Friday night in May 1921. The entire building was destroyed, but no one was injured.

The second Administration Building (left), was erected on the foundation of the first in 1921. A girls' dorm was constructed at the same time.

Northwest History Tour

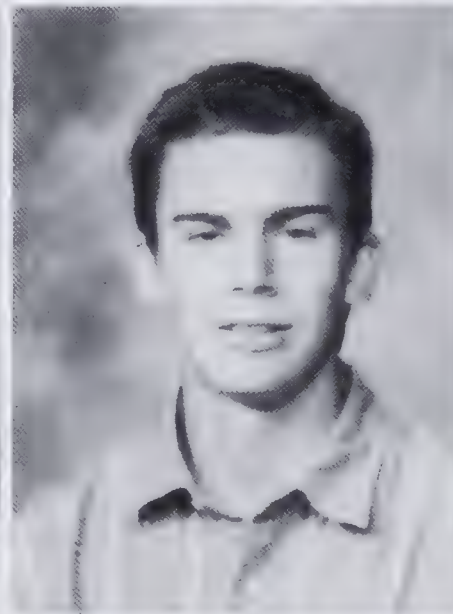

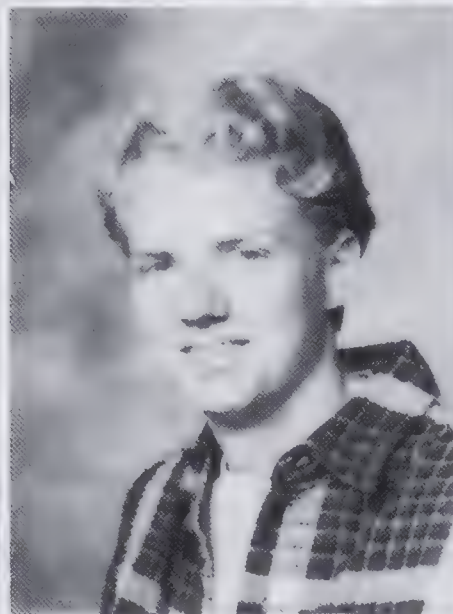

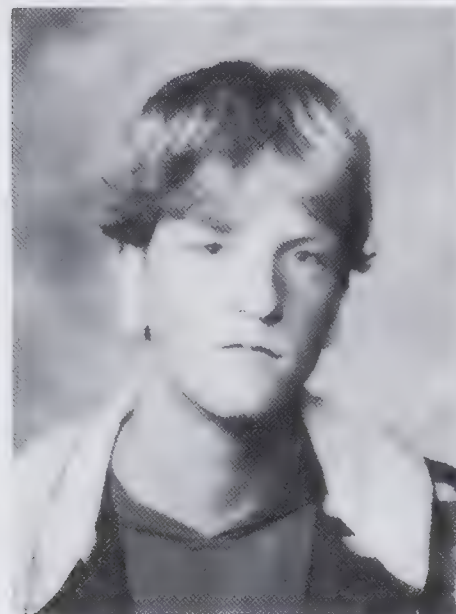

At 4:30 Sunday morning, September 18, 1994, the 18th Northwest History Tour left the Academy with a record-breaking 42 students and 6 faculty for a six-day fantastic voyage through three states. The early start was characteristic of the mornings to come, with students being awakened at 5:00 a.m. to clean, eat, and get on the bus for another exciting day of traveling to new places. Some sights which everyone observed were the Lewis and Clark settlement in Astoria, the Whitman Mission in Walla Walla, and shopping in Leavenworth. Many students will agree that the white water rafting was the highlight of the trip. A common saying was Mr. Miller's statement: "Now would be a good time to update your journals." Due to the careful driving of Mr. Hyde, the 1,350 mile trip was safely completed. This is an incredible experience which every student would enjoy.

On Task with New Friends

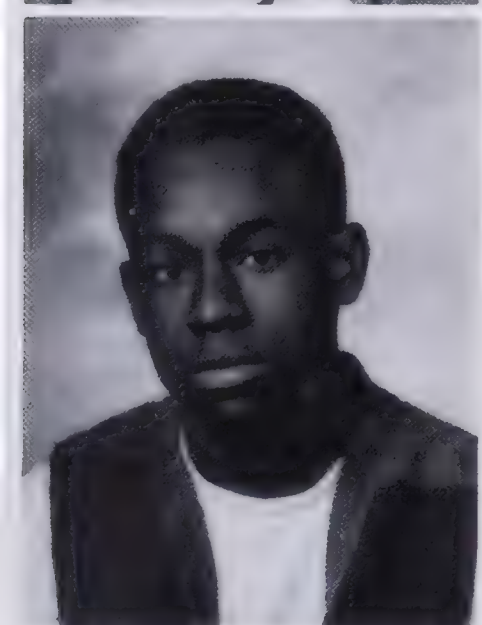

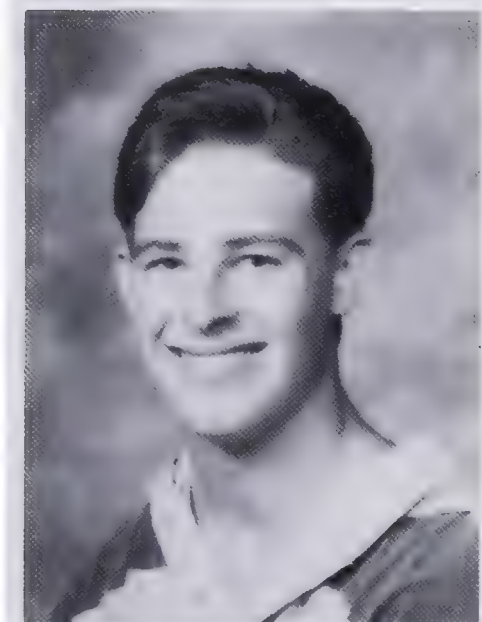

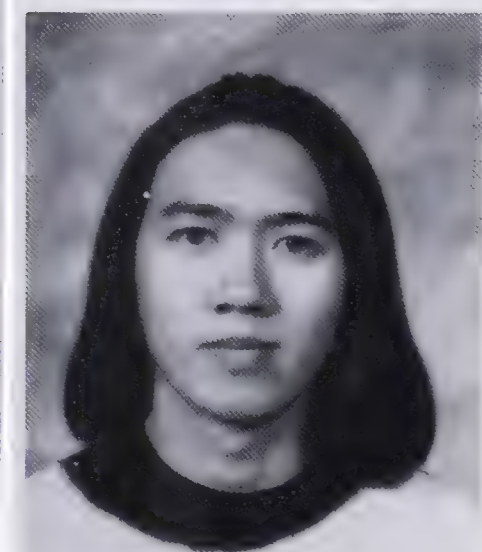

Laughter echoed across campus on the second day of school; it was On Task Day. Many of the students were new, but they soon discovered that with lots of smiles they could make many friends at the activities that included teacher advisor meetings, tug-of-war, mass volleyball, and a basketball contest.

"We thought it was cool," commented David Niderost and Brandy Sheldon.

"I thought that there needed to be more athletic activities and games that would bring everyone together," stated Brandon Rowe.

In general, On Task Day proved to be a big success.

And We Gain a Blessing

Sabbath afternoon provided opportunities for students to grow closer to God and friends. The options included hikes, bike rides, feeding the homeless, movies and programs. The relaxed atmosphere also allowed for quiet contemplation and peaceful reflection.

Hikes and bike rides brought students closer to God through nature. "You can really appreciate God's power when you see all the beauty

He has created," commented Josh Sines.

"It felt good doing something for someone less fortunate than myself!" Jenny Bullock smiled after a trip to feed the homeless in Kent.

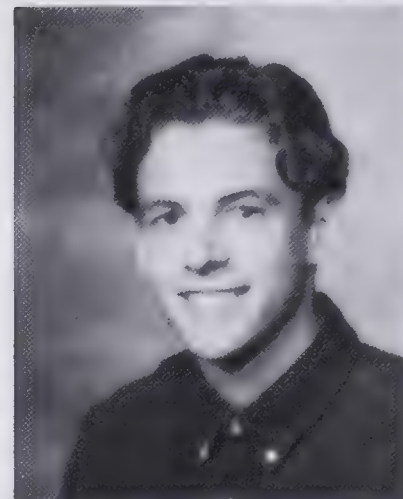

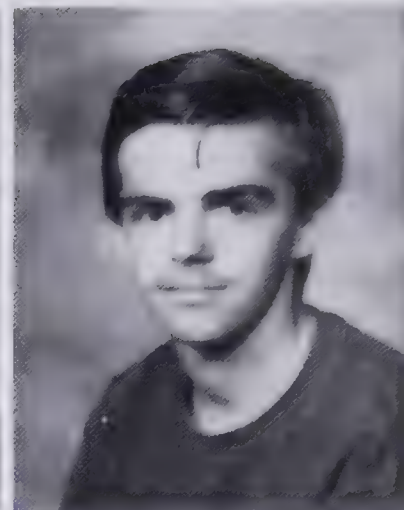

Still others, like Joni Sexton, had more positive feedback. "It's a great way to get together with friends and remember all the things God has given to us," she reflected.

During the interview with Nathan Tidwell, Mr. Farver reveals unusual stories from when he taught here.

Mr. Farver was the farm manager in 1958. He also taught agriculture and auto mechanics.

Declassified Secrets

Whenever there are strange stories from the past, the best way to find out about them is to ask someone who was there. Mr. Bob Farver came to Auburn Academy in 1954.

During the 1964 earthquake, Mr. Farver's wife was in charge of the cafeteria. When the ground started to shake, she yelled, "Everybody out!" For some reason everyone heard her and ran outside. The building wasn't damaged, and no one was sure whether the quick exit was wise, but the students listened to authority when it counted and stayed safe.

Sometimes the students didn't listen, and the result was tragedy. In 1951 the laundry building had a dumbwaiter to carry clothes upstairs for ironing. Disregarding the rules, a girl climbed inside for a ride up. When she leaned out to wave to her friends, the ceiling hit her on the head, killing her. On a school hike in 1977 the students were warned to stay on the trails where a river ran through huge cracks in the rocks. One senior boy disregarded the rule and ran to jump from one rock to another. He didn't make it, and they never found him.

Although there have never been any serious problems with the community, one time a couple of strangers got into the girls' dorm. The girls' dean called the guys' dean, who made an announcement over the intercom. All the guys rushed out of their dorm yelling and shouting as they ran to defend the girls. The intruders took off running and never came back.

After the runway was built in 1966, a United Airlines pilot who flew a 727, taught flying lessons in his free time. The cost for one hour of flying in the Cessna 150 was $8.00. One boy who had soloed wasn't thinking, and ran out of fuel near Puyallup. Fortunately, he landed just 50 feet short of the runway, and walked to the hangars to get fuel.

Remember your classes?

When we reflect back on this year and the friends we've made, the activities that we have participated in seem to stick out in my mind. The classes that we take often are given no more than a second thought. The very reason that we go to school is to learn things. But what do we remember from the Reflections of this year? It surely isn't the classes. Ask someone that graduated a few years back and probably they won't be able to name them all. Only one third of the faculty that I asked could name the classes they took their senior year.

So why am I telling you all this? Because in this time of Reflections I think it would be good to remember all of the teachers that made your education possible.

Activities

Just something to do

Many of the things that we do here at Auburn Adventist Academy are not related to school at all. Some things we do for no other reason than "Just something to do," says Isaac Bando. Take work for example: many of us work because we need the money so that we can come here. But others work for the same reason that Vicki Clover does, "because working is fun," and besides I love my job!" Josi Roberts thinks that, "Working isn't just for those who have to work, it is also for those who want to get an early start on life by developing good working habits early on in life." --Walter R. Cox

Jason James came to the ZK Western style banquet in the traditional way.

Organizations

Organized for Good

Everybody needs to feel like they belong. That is one reason many of us are members of various organizations. It might be one of the publications of the school, or maybe a music group. But whatever their reason for joining, students participating in organizations benefit others as well as themselves. When the gymnastic's team puts on a show, they do it because they like to do gymnastics. Musicians like to perform music, and publications staffers like to write. It is especially rewarding when students enjoy what they're doing--and so do their friends.

--Walter Cox

At 6'10" and 280 pounds, Mr. Kobberstad seems to have no problem pulling the back-hoe into the mud after the On Task Day tug-of-war. Strength like this will probably become legendary in Auburn's history.

Christopher McCullaugh is just one of the many personalities that make Auburn special.

Sports are a very vital part of Auburn. They provide opportunities for people to come out and socialize with their friends, and show their school spirit. It not only provides entertainment for the spectators, but exercise for the participants. It promotes physical fitness and teamwork. Louis Robinson stated, "I think the sports program really helps bring out the best in people, while at the same time enhancing our school spirit."

Sitting in front of Nelson Hall, Kelly Johnson reflects on this past year.

Goodbyes aren't always easy, but seniors Jamie Aldred and Justin Shumway anticipate graduation.

Reflections on the year

We reflect on this past year, the ups and downs of typical school life. The many challenges that we have faced seem rather insignificant when viewed from the overall picture of the year. While some of us will leave to take on the broad new world, others will move elsewhere, to new friends, new surroundings, and a new life. But there will be those of us who will come back to Auburn for another year of new challenges.

Even as our paths divide and split into the many individual roads of our lives, we will reflect on this year, as a special year, uniquely different from all the others. Just one step is all it takes. William Jennings Bryan says, "Destiny is not a matter of chance, it is a matter of choice; it is not a thing to be waited for, it is a thing to be achieved."
